During the Week 41 Cases Were Disposed of, 14 Verdicts Returned, Some Continued and Others Settled.

LICENSE COURT ON MONDAY.

George C. Marshall Sues D. C. Foltz, Dispute Being Over Valuable Property Near Dunbar—Small Suits Are Filed—Verdict for Township.

UNIONTOWN, Mar. 30.—The last week of civil court came to a close this morning and the jurors were discharged with the thanks of the court. During the week 41 cases were disposed of, 14 verdicts returned, some continued and others settled.

This morning the suit of George C. Marshall against D. C. Foltz of Dunbar was taken up. The agreement it was decided to let the court rule in the matter as the questions involved are principally of law and not of facts. The possession of two tracts of land near Dunbar is involved one of eighty and the other of 10 acres. They were purchased in 1872 by Edward Boehm who on account of his annual condition had the deeds made out in trust to Arthur W. Bliss of Uniontown. In 1881 the property was turned over to Bliss & Marshall who were operating a brick plant on the site the money being paid by the sum for it. Bliss died in 1903, and letters of administration were given to Lida G. Bliss who is alleged in her state ment entered this morning as being owned in part by Marshall. In spite of this fact she is alleged to have sold it to other parties one of them being Foltz. Marshall is suing to recover the same.

This morning a verdict was returned in favor of the defendant in the suit of the Atlantic Refining Company against Washington township. The plaintiff sued to recover $724 for damages incurred in an accident on a road in the township. The jury recommended that the drains be kept clear and that a guard rail be placed where the accident occurred. On Monday the court will meet at 10 o'clock A. M. when the license list will be disposed of.

EGGS ARE LOW.

Although Tomorrow is Easter, Hen Fruit Sells at Rate of 20 Cents a Dozen.

Easter eggs will be remarkably low this year. After a winter in which the price of hen fruit was uniformly high ranging from 30 to 40 cents a dozen a sudden break in the market occurred and now they can be secured for 20 cents. The demand is fair and so far has not come up to former years. Purchasers of eggs for eggs have found that there is not the demand for these articles that has existed in former years but they anticipate that it will pick up this afternoon and tonight.

A Knowledge of Forms, Knowledge of Functions and Knowledge of Products are all of the utmost value and in questions of life and health when a true and wholesome remedy is desired it should be remembered that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., is an ethical product which has met with the approval of the most eminent physicians and gives universal satisfaction, because it is a remedy of Known Quality, Known Excellence and Known Component Parts and has won the valuable patronage of millions of the Well Informed of the world, who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual use that it is the first and best of family laxatives, for which no extravagant or unreasonable claims are made.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent family laxative. As its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well Informed of the world to be the best we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of—Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, whether you call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

There are a number of beautiful scenes, strikingly accurate historic, with all the characters in correct costume and perfectly drilled. SATURDAY EVE., MARCH 30, 1907.

TERRORISTS AND TRAIN WRECKERS.

The persistent attempts to wreck the fast passenger trains of the Pennsylvania railroad on the Pittsburgh division indicate the presence in that section of a band of murderous desperadoes worse than the Red Terrorists of Russia. It is the only section of the country where the semblance of patriotism for an excuse, the former are evidently actuated either by robbery or mad malignity or both.

The man who would wreck a train and slaughter innocent and guilty is an inhuman monster. His heart is calloused; his nature perverted; the instincts of humanity are missing to him; he is an animal, a wild beast. The safety of society demands that he be caught and either caged or killed. Some wild animals are beyond taming; they are always dangerous; they are better dead. So it is with the murderous moral pervert.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the people are in hearty accord in this matter, and all the power of both should be exerted to hunt down and bring to justice the terrorists who in free America are plotting wholesale murder for the gratification of retail passion or petty plunder.

THE SAVING GRACE OF AMBITIOUS JOURNALISM.

The all-wise and ever strenuous Uniontown Herald, within two columns of space and at one fell stroke, kills off Senator Penrose as dead as a cock in the pit; demands with an imperious air the resignation of the President of the Town Council because he keeps his drug store open on Sunday and defies the law and The Herald; lands the Uniontown Standard a vigorous verbal kick because it does not more heartily support its demand for the Councilman's official head; accuses The Courier of having a guilty conscience in the matter of the libel law; says Connelville's "tin horn sports" are bad poker players to Uniontown's gamblers; and, finally, announces that it will shortly develop moral conditions in Fayette county that will make the rottenness of Roquefort cheese look and smell as the rose by comparison.

The Herald is a firm believer in advertising, and if its circulation and influence were commensurate with its ambitions it might be hoisted to its own elevation. Artemus Ward's monkey was described as "an amiable animal." The Herald is sometimes entertaining and other times amusing, but it is always interesting, and that is its saving grace. Heaven defend a community from a stupid newspaper!

The election laws have been made and amended so much that it is natural for the average legislator to be getting tired of the practice. It is, however, his duty to carefully examine into every proposed change and determine what is good and what is bad. But a large proportion of members signalily fail in their duty either for lack of energy, want of capacity or worse reasons.

Paternalism usually finds an early finish. The Anti-Black Hand bill has been discovered to be a blow aimed at organized labor. If this be true, organized labor must be in bad company, or in dangerous proximity thereto.

Among the Easter joys are the school boys and schoolgirls who are home for a brief vacation.

Andrew Carnegie says Wall Street prices are no price at all, and that Government regulation of the railways is fashionable in foreign countries. Nevertheless, Wall Street prices rule other prices and foreign fashions are not always fitted to free governments.

We are becoming a nickelodeon town.

The defendant in Fayette county's breach of promise case says he was, however, by the plaintiff, but he admits that he didn't kick when caught. Not being an angel, how could he fly?

The Train Terrorists are still trying to injure or kill Pennsylvania railroad passengers.

"Rattle his bones over the stones, for he's a poor pauper whom nobody owns," didn't apply to the late Thomas Stafford if they did rattle his bones over the rails until they got them into a Philadelphia medical college.

High School athletics has a friend with a phrenic pocketbook and an athletic desire to open it up. More power to him.

The Fayette county Kinslyke has another murder marked up against it, but from present appearances the case will be tried in heaven.

Easter eggs are cheaper, but the Easter bonnet is still up in the air.

The Legislature in talking adjournment, its members have been talking a lot of nonsense from time to time. If they can't improve, they had better not even talk adjournment, but act upon it.

Governor Stuart has set his face sternly against extravagance of any kind. There has been plenty of it to last the State for a long time.

The big stick presented to the railway employees at Chicago today has been changed into an olive branch.

The Florentine rifle should be suppressed, or at least regulated by the same measures of precaution imposed upon other deadly weapons.

It cost Bela $2,500 for just dropping in to see Hannah a few times. If this is the established tariff, some bachelors around here are running up pretty big accounts.

Secretary Cortelyou is counting his money. He takes no chances.

The Uniontown Herald "calls" the Uniontown Standard and there's nothing but white cliffs in the pot. This is where "the Pike" come together.

The street sweeper will next week make a demonstration in honor of Spring. If the young lady remains with us.

The West Penn weathered the floods all right, but the aftermath is worse than some.

The envelope ballot is intended to do up votes in retail packages for wholesale delivery.

A PUBLISHING HOUSE.

Mennonites at Scottdale Start Work on Three Story Printing House Friday.

WILL PRINT ALL CHURCH WORK.

This Will Be the Central Point of the Literary Work of the Church—Will Prove Quite a Thing in Mill Town's Industries—Other Notes of Town

SCOTSDALE, Pa., March 29.—The first industry to start up in Scottdale is a printing plant which will be one of the biggest anywhere in the country for the size of the town and which will do all the printing of the churches of the United States. The Mennonite Publishing Company has bought a new building 100x10 feet brick and the work is now being done. They now have a frame structure two stories high and of about 40x20 but this is insufficient for their growing business.

On Wednesday the church plant at Elkhart Indiana was burned to the ground and destroyed all the machinery so all the work formerly done there will come here. The Mennonite Publishing Company in Scottdale is now turning out seven of the church plant and everything of the new plant in the home. Rev. Arion Loucks and Rev. A. D. Martin are at the head of the enterprise which was formerly conducted by the independent office.

William Miley a local doctor at the structural work of the new plant in the U. S. East Iron Pipe and Foundry Company had a narrow escape from death on Friday when a plant fell upon him striking him upon the head cutting his scalp and rendering him unconscious for some time. He was removed to his home and will recover unless some complication or unexpected set in say the doctors. It was reported about town that he had been killed instantly.

There are many watchers of the weather keeping their eyes close upon the sky trying to forecast the day of weather that is to be turned out Sunday. Everyone desires a pleasant and sunny day along the river and has been delivered the last several days and which would be almost too good to be true for the day for all the new reasons in women's headgear and her other spring plumage. It is certain that the dance at the churches will be large on Sunday morning and one can reasonably look for the streets to be a panorama of beauty. This is pay day at the mills and plenty of money will be in circulation. Likewise the man mortal will appear tomorrow listening in vanished shoes and decked in finery.

There will be special children's Easter services at Jacob Creek Methodist Episcopal Church Rev. Arthur Auld pastor Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. There will be preaching at Wesley chapel at 10:30 in the morning and at 7 o'clock Sunday evening and will continue throughout the week.

Oscar Hite who lives near town and who owns a fine horse, has been in the locality bought his engine new set of driver harness on Friday and when the animal was decked out in all its pomp of about 11c straps and harness and the harness seemed to turn it around. Mr. Hite was driving it on his way and when the horse gave a sudden lunge and over an embankment upsetting the wagon and falling in such position that the shafts had to be taken off to get the animal up again. Mr. Hite or his child who was on the seat with him and the horse were hurt. The new collar pinching the horse's neck was probably the real cause of the horse's action. It is still hoped that the animal will be recovered and is believed by some that the horse was always used to wearing good harness. Owen Rittenhouse a professional mill worker of West Scottdale is building a fine new barn on his lot.

From Westmoreland's County Seat.

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 29.—It is already some time that the recent order of certain Grooms threatening to honorably discharge any member of the State Police force will not be very effective in barring Capital from the barracks. It is quietly rumored among the troops here that at least two and possibly more will go through the new orders provisions in the very near future. It seems that military plans were made some time previous to the issuance of the order and that arrangements have been made so far as to make a postponement practically impossible. It is still hoped however that the order will have a wholesome effect upon the unsuiting members of the command.

Basketball will devote to the defense of Greensburg's West Penn League team here. Pleasant James Atkinson of the club has signed contracts with Duke and McLaughlin of the local five places during the last season. Both men have been out to practice and show up in good form. Duke is an especially good catcher. The basketball season closes April 5 when the men will report to duty.

Vern Leggo a Pennsylvania railroad conductor is in very serious condition at the Westmoreland hospital with a bullet wound in his left side dangerously close to the heart. While his train was passing the vicinity of Ridgely yesterday he was shot by either Walter Leggo of Greensburg or Hamilton Parsons of Pittsburgh who were practicing with a Robert rifle Leggo was packing out his report when the bullet came in through the car door and struck him. The train was stopped and the wounded man hurried to the Westmoreland hospital. The bullet cannot be located and it is feared the victim will die.

Both boys were in bed and it was not until 11 o'clock that the boys were found. William Griffith a student employed in the Hamilton shift was found in a peculiar position at 11 o'clock. Griffith who recently lost an arm was found in a peculiar position. While working at the pump a steam pipe burst and he was scalded to death before he could reach the boiler. Only one other man was in the mine at the time but he escaped unhurt. Griffith's body was taken to Gosney's mortuary and prepared for burial. He was 18 years old and leaves a wife and several children living near town.

A MAKER OF HISTORY

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.
Author of "The Master Mummer," "A Prince of Sinners," "Mysterious Mr. Sablin," "Anna the Adventuress," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by LITTLE, BROWN, AND COMPANY.

She seated and addressed her letter and saw it completed. Afterward she crossed the courtyard to the restaurant and did her best to eat some dinner. When she had finished it was only half past 8. She rang for the lift and ascended to the fourth floor. On her way down the corridor a sudden thought struck her. She took a key from her pocket and entered the room which her brother had occupied.

His things were still lying about in some disorder, and neither of his trunks was locked. She went down on her knees and calmly proceeded to go through his belongings. It was rather a forlorn hope, but it seemed to her just possible that there might be in some of his pockets a letter which would throw light upon his disappearance. She found nothing of the sort, however. There were picture postcards, a few photographs and a good many restaurant bills, but they were all from places in Germany and Austria. At the bottom of the second trunk, however, she found something which she had evidently found it worth while to carefully preserve. It was a thick sheet of official looking paper, bearing at the top an embossed crown and covered with German writing. It was numbered at the top "17," and it was evidently an odd sheet of some document. She folded it carefully up and took it back with her to her own room. Then, with the help of a German dictionary, she commenced to study it. At the end of an hour she had made out a rough translation, which she read carefully through. When she had finished she was thoroughly perplexed. She had an uncomfortable sense of having come into touch with something wholly unexpected and mysterious.

"What am I to do?" she said to herself softly. "What can it mean? Where on earth can Guy have found this?" There was no one to answer her, no one to advise. An overwhelming sense of her loneliness brought the tears into her eyes. She sat for some time with her face buried in her hands. Then she rose up, calmly destroyed her translation with minute care and locked away the mysterious sheet at the bottom of her dressing bag. The more she thought of it the less, after all, she felt inclined to connect it with his disappearance.

CHAPTER IV.

MONSIEUR ALFRED looked over her shoulder for the man who must surely be in attendance, but he looked in vain. "Mademoiselle wishes a table—for herself alone," he repeated doubtfully. "If you please," she answered. It was obvious that mademoiselle was of the class which does not frequent night cafes alone, but after all that was generally M. Alfred's concern. She came perhaps from that strange land of the free, whose daughters had long ago looked over the barriers of sex with the same abandon that Mlle. Flossie would display the soles of her feet a few hours later in their national dance. If she had chanced to raise her veil no earthly persuasions on her part would have secured for her the freedom of that little room, for M. Alfred's appreciation of likeness was equal to his memory for faces. But it was not until she was comfortably ensconced at a corner table, from which she had a good view of the room, that she did so, and M. Alfred realized with a philosophic shrug of his shoulders the error he had committed.

Phyllis looked about her with some curiosity. It was too early for the habitués of the place, and most of the tables were empty. The scarlet coated band were smoking cigarettes and had not yet produced their instruments. The conductor curbed his black mustache and stared hard at the beautiful young English lady without, however, being able to extract a single glance in return. One or two men also tried to convey to her by smiles and glances the fact that her solitude need continue no longer than she chose. The unattached ladies put their heads together and discussed her with little pearls of laughter. To all of these things she remained indifferent. She ordered a supper which she ate mechanically and while which she scarcely drank. All the while she was considering. Now that she was here, what could she do? Of whom was she to make inquiries? She scanned the faces of the newcomers with a certain grave anxiety which puzzled them. She noticed no repeated notice. She asked entirely at her ease.

Alfred, during one of his peregrinations around the room, passed close to her table. She stopped him. "But that mademoiselle is well," he remarked, with a little bow. "Excellent, I thank you," she answered. "I would have passed on, but she does not seem to be alone." "I have very many visitors here," he remarked. "Is it the same always?" "I smiled," he declared, "it is nothing. There are many who come here every evening. They amuse themselves here." "You have a good many strangers about?" she asked.

"But certainly," he declared. "All the time."

"I have a brother," she said, "who was here eleven nights ago—let me see—that would be last Tuesday week. He is tall and fair, about twenty-one and, they say, like me. I wonder if you remember him?"

M. Alfred shook his head slowly. "That is strange," he declared, "for, as a rule, I forget no one. Last Tuesday week I remember perfectly well. It was a quiet evening. La Scala was here, but of the rest no one. If mademoiselle's brother was here it is most strange."

Her lip quivered for a moment. She was disappointed. "I am so sorry," she said. "I hoped that you might have been able to help me. He left the Grand hotel on that night with the intention of coming here, and he never returned. I have been very much worried ever since."

She was no great judge of character, but M. Alfred's sympathy did not impress her with its sincerity. "If mademoiselle desires," he said, "I will make inquiries among the waiters. I very much fear, however, that she will obtain no news here."

He departed, and Phyllis watched him talking to some of the waiters and the leader of the orchestra. Presently he returned. "I am very sorry," he announced, "but the brother of mademoiselle could not have come here. I have inquired of the garçons and of M. Jules there, who forgets no one. They answer all the same."

"Thank you very much," she answered. "It must have been somewhere else."

She was unreasonably disappointed. It had been a very slender chance, but at least it was something tangible. She had scarcely expected to have it snatched so soon and so thoroughly. She dropped her veil to hide the tears which she felt were not far from her eyes and summoned the waiter for her bill. There seemed to be no object in staying longer. Suddenly the unexpected happened. A hand flashing with jewels was rested for a moment upon her table. When it was withdrawn a scrap of paper remained there.

Phyllis looked up in amazement. The girl to whom the hand belonged was sitting at the next table, but her head was turned away, and she seemed to be only concerned in watching the door. She drew the scrap of paper toward her and cautiously opened it. This is what she read, written in English, but with a foreign turn to most of the letters:

"M. Alfred lied. Your brother was here. Wait till I speak to you." Instinctively she crumpled up this strange little note in her hand. She struggled hard to maintain her composure. She had at once the idea that every one in the place was looking at her. M. Alfred, indeed, on his way down the room wondered what had driven the hopeless expression from her face.

The waiter brought her bill. She paid it and tipped him with prodigality which for a woman was almost reckless. Then she ordered coffee and after a second's hesitation cigarettes. Why not? Nearly all the women were smoking, and she desired to pass for the moment as one of them. For the first time she ventured to gaze at her own door.

It was the young lady from Vienna. She was dressed in a wonderful daintiness of white lace, and she wore a large picture hat adjusted at exactly the right angle for her profile. From her throat and bosom there flashed the sparkle of many gems. The finger which held her cigarette was ablaze with diamonds. She leaned back in her seat smoking lazily, and she met Phyllis' further gaze with almost icy coldness. But a moment later, when M. Alfred's back was turned, she leaned forward and addressed her rapidly.

"A man will come here," she said, "who could tell you if he was willing all that you seek to know. He will come tonight. He comes all the nights. You will see I hold my handkerchief so in my right hand. When he comes I shall drop it—so."

The girl's swift speech, her half fearful glances toward the door, puzzled Phyllis.

"Can you not come nearer to me and talk?" she asked.

"No. You must not speak to me again. You must not let any one, especially the man himself, know what I have told you. No more now. Watch for the handkerchief."

"But what shall I say to him?" "The girl took no notice of her. She was looking in the opposite direction. She seemed to have edged away as far as possible from her. Phyllis drew a long breath. She felt her heart beating with excitement. The place suddenly seemed to her like part of a nightmare. And then all was clear again. Fortune was on her side. The secret of Guy's disappearance was in this room, and a few careless words from the girl at the next table had told her more than an entire police system had been able to discover. But why the mystery? What was she to say to the man when he came? The girl from Vienna was talking to some friends and talking carelessly with a little morsel of lace which she had drawn from her bosom. Phyllis watched it with the eyes of a cat. Every now and then she watched also the door.

The place was much fuller now. Mlle. Flossie had arrived with a small company of friends from Maxima's. The music was playing all the time. The peeping of cois was almost incessant. The volume of sound had swelled. The laughter and grating of friends betrayed more abundance than earlier in the evening. Old acquaintances had been renewed and new ones made. Mademoiselle from Vienna was surrounded by a little circle of admirers. Still she held in her right hand a crumpled up little ball of lace.

Men passing down the room tried to attract the attention of the beautiful young English dame who looked out upon the little scene so indifferently as regarded individuals and yet with such eager interest as a whole. No one was bold enough, however, to make a second effort. Necessity at times gives birth to a swift capacity. Fresh from her single country life, Phyllis found herself still with effortlessness to command the most hardened boulevardier who paused to gape her. Her eyes and lips expressed with ease the most convincing and absolute indifference to their approaches. A man may sometimes have anger; he rarely has courage to combat indifference. So Phyllis held her own and waited.

And at last the handkerchief fell. Phyllis felt her own heart almost stop beating as she gazed down the room. A man of medium height, dark, immaculately dressed, distinguished, was slowly approaching her, exchanging greetings on every side. His languid eyes fell upon Phyllis. Those who had watched her previously saw then a change. The cold indifference had vanished as though anxious to attract his attention. She succeeded easily enough.

He was almost opposite her table, and her half smile seemed to invite him, but little choice. He touched the back of the chair which fronted her and took off his hat.

"Mademoiselle permits?" he asked softly.

"But certainly," she answered, "it is for you whom I have been waiting."

"Mademoiselle datters me," he murmured, more than a little astonished.

"Not in the least," she answered. "I have been waiting to ask you what has become of my brother, Guy Peyton."

He drew out the chair and seated himself. His eyes never left her face. "Mademoiselle," he murmured, "this is most extraordinary."

She noticed then that his hands were trembling.

CHAPTER V.

I AM asking a great deal of you, George! I know it. But you see how helpless I am. And read the letter—read it for yourself."

He passed Phyllis' letter across the small round dining table. His guest took it and read it carefully through. "How old is the young lady?" he asked.

"Twenty-three."

"And the boy?"

"Twenty-one."

"Orphans, I think you said?"

"Orphans and relatives."

"Well, then?"

"Moderately."

Duncombe leaned back in his chair and slipped his port thoughtfully.

"It is an extraordinary situation," he remarked.

"Extraordinary indeed!" his friend assented. "But so far as I am concerned you can see how I am fixed. I am older than either of them, but I have always been their nearest neighbor and their most intimate friend. If ever they have needed advice they have come to me for it. If ever I have needed a day's solitude or even a friend I have gone to them. This continental tour of theirs we discussed and planned out months before-hand. If my misfortune had not come on just when it did I should have gone with them, and even if to the last we hoped that I might have been able to have come to Paris with Phyllis."

Duncombe nodded.

"Tell me about the boy," he said. His host shrugged his shoulders.

"You know what they're like at that age," he remarked. "He was at Harrow, but he shied at college, and there was no one to insist upon his going. The pair of them had only a firm of lawyers for guardians. He's just a good looking, clean shaven, high spirited young fellow, full of beans and needing the bit every now and then. But, of course, he's no different from the run of young fellows of his age and if an adventure came his way I suppose he'd see it through."

"And the girl?"

Andrew Duncombe rose from his seat. "I will show you her photograph," he said.

He passed into an inner room divided from the dining room by curtains. In a moment or two he reappeared.

"Here it is," he said and laid a picture upon the table.

Now, Duncombe was a young man who prided himself a little on being unimpressible. He took up the picture with a certain tolerant interest and examined it at first without any special feeling, yet in a moment or two he felt himself grateful for those great disfiguring jaws. From behind within his host was laughing at least, if not all that passed. A curious disturbance seemed to have passed into his blood. He felt his eyes brighten and his breath came a little quicker as he unconsciously created in his imagination the living presentment of the girl whose picture he was still holding. Tall she was and slim, with a soft white throat and long, graceful neck, eyes rather darker than her complexion warranted, a mouth narrow, but bright as stars, a little with the divine lines of humor and understanding. It was only a picture, but a realization of the living image seemed to be creeping in upon him. He made the excuse of seeking a better light and moved across to a distant lamp.

He bent over the picture, but it was not the picture which he saw. He saw the girl herself, and even with the half formed thought he saw her expression change. He saw her eyes lit with sorrow and appeal. He saw her arms outstretched toward him. He seemed even to hear her soft cry.

He knew then what his answer would be to his friend's prayer. He thought no more of the excuse which he had been building in his mind, of all the practical suggestions which he had been prepared to make. Common sense died away within him. The matter of fact man of thirty was ready to tread in the footsteps of his great predecessor and play the modern knight errant with all the whole heartedness of Don Quixote himself. He fancied himself by her side, and his heart leaped with joy of it. He thought no more of abandoned cricket matches and neglected house parties. A danger of fire had been laid upon his somewhat torpid flesh and blood.

"Well!" Andrew asked.

Duncombe returned to the table and laid the picture down with a reluctance which he could scarcely conceal.

"Very nice photograph," he remarked. "Taken locally?"

Bloodlessness or Thin Blood

Because they actually form a certain amount of blood each day, Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are an unequalled success in a treatment for bloodlessness or anemia, as it is sometimes called.

Lack of blood is indicated by paleness of the lips, gums and eyelids, and is usually accompanied by weakness, tired feelings, indigestion and low spirits.

Anemia is generally very difficult to overcome, but you can be certain that every case of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are doing you at least some good, because of their blood-forming qualities, and that persistent treatment will be rewarded by thorough cure.

Science has discovered the elements of Nature which go directly to the formation of new, rich blood, and these are most happily combined in Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills, which have in hundreds of thousands of cases prevented their marvelous power to create new blood and build new, firm flesh and tissue. Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills, 50 cents a box, 3 boxes for $2.00, at all dealers, or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

If I took cold it seemed to settle on the kidneys and increased my sufferings. Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me and restored and restored the kidneys to normal condition. Wright-Metzler Company,

Connellsville.

Uniontown.

At a Season When Every Sentient Thing Takes Unto Itself a New Garment.

The human being who does not yearn to do likewise lacks an instinct common to the universe. The spirit that sends your wife or daughter to the milliners, that prompts you to linger before an array of dazzling neckties on your way to lunch, is the same which clothes the earth with spring apparel and brings a new blue to the winter sky.

It is all a part of the spirit of the Easter Bonnet which fills the shop windows, and which next Sunday, will rule the christian world. Easter dress is a part of the universal spring spirit of renewal, and unless nature herself can be accused of undue attention to dress, you can find as many reasons for your new spring gown or new suit of clothes as there are new leaves budding on the bare brown trees.

This is a shop that pays the deepest homage to the universal spirit of newness by presenting to the most discriminative clientele in this section—a collection of merchandise abounding with every knack of style that is decreed as modish.

An Important Specialty of Ours. Women's Tailored Suits, At $20.00, $25.00 and $35.

Rather than an innovation, it is the development of a part of our business. We have always centered our energies on suits at these prices. Beginning with this season that series of garments rises to the dignity of a specialty.

Why? Because we have found the ways and means to present tailored suits at those prices in a variety of styles, fabrics and colors at least twice greater than competing shops.

These are facts that will impress themselves forcibly upon you when you view the collection. The space our suit department occupies is a silent testimonial to the rapid growth of our suit business and rapid growth can be attributed to but these reasons: Dependable style and quality at economic prices. That's the reason why next Sunday "Wright-Metzler ready-for-service apparel" will dominate every gathering that is governed by the spirit of proper Easter garb.

A Superb Collection of Women's Waists.

Nearly 75 feet of shelving is given over to this department. Eighty feet of glass floor cases are used for display. That's how important we hold our waist department to be. This would not be the case unless we controlled the larger number of waist sales in Connellsville, and the logical deduction is superiority.

Variety plays no small part, of course, for no woman can be satisfactorily served with but a few to choose among. Variety, dependable style and prices comparatively low means thorough representation in the style parade of Sunday next. $1.00 to $22.50.

Exclusiveness—is the Key-note of Our Millinery Supremacy.

THERE is no more attractive shopping place in this town today than the Wright-Metzler millinery section. The happiest selections we have ever made are here in profusion:
